

Abstract of the Disclosure

A metering pump device for a vehicle heater includes an inlet chamber, an outlet chamber, a first valve arrangement between the inlet chamber and the outlet chamber, which permits a fluid exchange substantially only from the inlet chamber to the outlet chamber, a displacement piston element, which in a first piston position minimizes the volume of the inlet chamber and in a second piston position minimizes the volume of the outlet chamber.